DiscoverPoint Software Selected "Product of the Month" by Government Computer News

Unique approach to search enhancements for SharePoint previously unseen

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15, 2012 /PRNewswire/ -- Today Discover Technologies, LLC announced that Government Computer News (GCN) selected its DiscoverPoint solution for Microsoft's industry-leading SharePoint collaboration software Product of the Month February, 2012. According to GCN Staff Writer Greg Crow, DiscoverPoint was selected because of its ability to "prevent agencies from constantly reinventing the wheel" and because it "helps users move forward with new tasks and projects."

According to Crowe, "The really cool things start happening after you've been using the system for a while. As more personnel and documents relevant to what you are doing become available on the system, they will (automatically) show up on your discovery page. Secondly, as you perform more WEB searches and read more documents, DiscoverPoint will change the items it pulls up for you." The entire article is available on GCN's site at <http://gcn.com>.

"We are proud that Government Computer News chose DiscoverPoint as their Product of the Month," said Dave Truitt, Discover Technologies founder and CEO. Truitt further explained, "The Lab at GCN is well respected for their product reviews and ability to understand diverse enterprise search solutions. Today most organizations in both the public and private sectors understand the value of enterprise wide collaborative efforts. Whether you are trying to catch terrorists, find the cure for cancer or complete complex engineering projects on multiple continents, knowing which experts have relevant experience around your current challenge can be key to finding solutions. DiscoverPoint provides insight into enterprise content and the employee knowledge base delivering tremendous value that was previously unavailable."
